INSIDE OUTSIDE

The theme of inside and outside features through the format of my publication itself, as the publication has two narratives for each interviewer and requires the reader to interact by folding the publication inside out.

The content was initially inspired by the Johari Window Model, a model that aims at improving self-awareness and group relations combined with my idea of Saussure's Binary Opposites which derived from the theme of inside out. Through the combination of both, I wanted to explore Identity and Anthropology based on the concept of Social Constructionism, a theory that contradicts and deconstructs the idealism of 'uniqueness' in reference to identity and characters as being the by-product/construct of one's society.

Through the questionnaire, I intend to expose identities of my interviewees giving into their own description of their character, whilst with a flip of a page towards Anthropology, a deeper level is exposed, giving into the patterns of how the culture's norms and values influenced and shaped the individual's identities - their character, behavior, beliefs...

"Identity is about belonging, about what you have in common with some people and what differentiates you from others. At its most basic it gives you a sense of personal location, the stable core to your individuality. But it is also about your social relationships, your complex involvement with others." - Weeks, 1990
